

Fontanna Orła Białego [the White Eagle Fountain]

Szczecin

The fountain is located at the focal point of Orła Białego Square] in the district of Śródmieście (the city centre), approx. 1.5 km from the Main Train Station. There are paid parking spaces around the square. In the square near Żołnierza Polskiego Square and Brama Portowa [the Port Gate] numerous trams and buses stop.

The project of the fountain was made by J. F. Grael, and the building itself - by the sculptor J.K. Koch and stone mason Angerer. It was founded in 1732. It was then a part of the first aqueduct in the town. The shape of its base resembles a four-leaf clover, which can be a symbol of good luck. At each of the corners of the clover there used to be griffins supporting the figure of an eagle rising in the air and holding a lizard
