

The Dormition of the Most Holy Mother of God Orthodox church

The parish Orthodox church is located in the north-eastern part of the town, near the town walls on Adama Mickiewicza Street in Koszalin. It belongs to the Koszalin deanery of the Wrocław-Szczecin diocese of the Polish Autocephalous Orthodox Church.

The Orthodox church (a former castle chapel) has been entered into the register of historic monuments in November 1956 under the number A-768.

It is the Gothic castle church from the turn of the 13th and the 14th centuries – currently an Orthodox church. The church was built about 1300 as a convent church for Cistercian nuns who came to Koszalin in 1278. The oldest mention about the church comes from 1491.

It is a brick, aisleless church built on a rectangular plan. A porch was added later on the western side of the building. The presbytery has not been preserved. The building is topped by a pitched roof with an
