

Rohleder (Kletzin) House

Stargard Szczeciński

The Kletzin House is situated at the end of Mieszka I Street by the Brama Pyrzycka [the Gate of Pyrzyce]. You can reach it by taking Mieszka I Street only. The closest MZK bus stop is the one at Czarnieckiego Street – follow Prezydentów RP Lecha Kaczyńskiego i Ryszarda Kaczorowskiego Street, and the one at Krzywoustego Street – follow Sukiennicza Street.

The house is a late Gothic, fifteenth-century residential tenement building initially built for storage purposes. The elevation, divided by ledges, has characteristics of Renaissance architecture. The top took the shape of stairs with arch-shaped windows. The first storey was intended for flats. The building was almost completely destroyed during the Second World War. The only fragments left

The owner to which the building owes its name was a postal worker, Rohleder, who lived in the house in the nineteenth century. The name of his successor, Kletzin, who succeeded Rohleder in 1922, is also used when referring to the building.

Currently, the building serves as a seat of the library of Stargard offering lending services and a reading room. The building may be accessed during the opening time of the institution.
