Screening of 'The Alphabet', directed by Erwin Wagenhofer.

98% of children in the pre-school age reaches the genius in divergent thinking (which is one of the skills needed for creative thinking), but after graduating from high school only 2% of them achieved such results. It is largely standardized education based on competition, evaluation and testing, that kills children's creativity and imagination. Alphabet shows how modern education system determines our way of looking at the world and shapes our personality. The alphabet goes into the hearts of parents. Alphabet moves teachers.
