

The B-Werk bunker in Szczecinek

The B-Werk bunker is located on Kościuszki Street near the Viki hotel, by the road towards Połczyn Zdrój. In front of the bunker, there is a large, free-of-charge parking lot.

B-Werk is one of the largest bunkers of the Pomeranian Line. Nowadays, it functions as a military museum, where visitors can see its interior and get familiarized with the collections and the history of the Pomeranian Line. In front of the bunker, there is an exhibition of military vehicles, including an original tank.

The construction of the bunker started in 1934. It is one of seven two-storey heavy bunkers of the entire Pomeranian Line – the best preserved one. It is fitted with four heavy machine guns stations, one of which was located in an armoured dome and two others in unique armoured casemates. The task of the bunker was to defend one of the most important roads leading to Germany against a potential attack of Polish troops. There are also such rooms as an engine room, where power generating units were located, a
